Dear Ms. Parker,
I'm Todd Hamilton. I am a student at Peterson High School. My social studies teacher, Mr. Garcia, gave me your e-mail address. As you probably have heard from Mr. Garcia, I will give a presentation about a tourist spot in this town. I would like to speak about your history museum because it is visited by a large number of tourists from both inside and outside the country.

Information about the museum's history, events, historic buildings, and exhibitions can be found on your website, but there are a few other things I would like to ask you about. Those include information about what your museum staff does to attract visitors, what makes your museum more attractive than others, and so on.

If you don't mind, would you let me have an interview with you and your staff on a day that is convenient for you? Also, may I take some photos of the museum, as I would like to make slides to show in the presentation? If an interview is not possible, I hope you will continue to allow me to ask questions by e-mail.

Sincerely,
Todd Hamilton

A Unique Italian Village

There is a village called Chamois in the north of Italy. It is known as the only village in the country that people cannot get to by car. Because it is surrounded by mountains, many tourists who love nature visit this village all year round. However, only about one hundred people live there. In fact, throughout the history of the village, only a small number of people have lived there at any time.

The ways to get to the village have been limited for a long time. As Italy's economy improved in the early 1960s, the country's road system also got better. At that time, Chamois was connected with other areas by roads that people went through only by bicycle or on foot. With the better road system in the country, the village people were asked if they wanted to build new roads for cars. Yet, roads were never built because most of the local people were against the idea.

However, this did not mean people wanted to completely stay away from the other cities. Instead of building roads for cars, they wanted to have cable cars that would travel through the air. This is because they thought cable cars were a fast and useful way of transport and could avoid damaging the nature of the area. They thought they could reach the nearest village by cable car and go to other areas from there.

The fact that the village cannot be reached by car makes this village environmentally friendly. Because of the small size of the village and its rich nature, it is a good place to perform eco-friendly projects. Chamois is one of the nineteen places that make up the "Alpine Pearls." It is a group of places that are working on projects that protect the beauty of nature, such as road systems with climate-friendly options.
